FIGHT IS ON OVER LABOR SECRETARY

"Open Shop" Is Basis of Controversy in Filling Post.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

Washington, Jan. 12.—News of the fight behind the scenes between capital and labor over the type of man who shall be the next secretary of labor is beginning to trickle out and explain to some extent the upset in the cabinet state which had been tentatively made up by President-elect Harding.

Both sides are demanding the impossible. Some representatives of manufacturing interests want a man who will recognize the right to close a shop to union workers. Labor on the other hand wants a man who is a fundamentalist prejudiced against unionism and who will not be harmful to the unionization of plants and factories that are not organized by the unions.

Lower Prices Changes Status.
Briefly this is the whole struggle between capital and labor over again with this change. The prices are certain manufacturers who believe the time is ripe to strike a body blow at unions by refusing to employ union men or women. The industry is in a state of confusion. The labor side is in a state of confusion. The industry is in a state of confusion. The labor side is in a state of confusion.

Rather significantly the other day the New York Herald, owned by F. A. Munsey, and an influential organ of the republican party, hinted at the fight over the secretaryship of labor by telling both sides that the appointment of an extremist could not be expected. It is said that the editorial in question was inspired by a desire on the part of Mr. Harding's friends to make his task easier by telling the employers in the midst of manufacturing interests that they could not hope for editorial support in their campaign for a partisan on the labor question.

Hoover Is Controversy.

The fortunes of Herbert Hoover are to some extent bound up in the controversy. Mr. Hoover was practically selected by Mr. Harding for the secretaryship of labor because liberal employers were wanted. Fair and square was a partisan thought the former food administrator's attitude toward the labor question was sound and that he enjoyed the confidence of both sides. The American Federation of Labor itself recently invited Mr. Hoover to appear before it and give advice and it is suspected that labor would accept the appointment of Mr. Hoover with slight or no reluctance. But because they have been in fear that a neutral would not be appointed and that the next four years would be a constant battle with an foe of unionism in the department of labor.

Concessions Are Needed.

The trouble is that both sides are emphasizing their rights when each side should be announcing their concessions. No one can win if they do not work out. That's why Mr. Harding himself is eager to appoint a man who shall have the imagination, initiative and nerve to work out a solution of the conflict between employer and employee. The importance of the appointment too lies in the fact that the department of labor investigators must be impartial and just toward both sides. It is not enough that their conciliators must be skillful enough to retain the confidence of the parties to a strike. The fear of the conservative labor leaders that there never will be any recourse to government boards of mediation and conciliation and that the progress which has been made toward the friendly settlement of labor disputes will be lost.

Two Conference Fail.

The president's first industrial conference failed because both sides refused to compromise. The second conference, which was held at the White House, was somewhat further along but never attempted to deal with fundamentals. It set about to devise means of settling industrial disputes, only after the fact. The one and closed shop question is still unsolved. The real fight that is coming is not over reduction in wages but the open shop issue. Employers organizations are not ready to make the first step in the appointment of a secretary of labor. There are two kinds of open shop, one that is open to union and non-union workers with two classes on an equal footing and in which the management deals with the workers through local committees, with reference to their national organizations. The other is the shop closed to union workers altogether. Unfortunately some employers leaders mean the latter kind when they talk about an "open shop." What they mean is one that is closed to union men and open only to non-union men.

Labor Fights to Keep Rights.

However, the interesting undercurrent of the fight is that labor is not making at this time a concerted fight against wages reduced by a deflationary policy. It is already won. Now that prices are falling and the cost of living is being slowly but gradually reduced, the worker whose wages are not reduced is in a position to gain. Labor as evidenced in the department of labor statistics, for the most part received wage increases during the year when the cost of living was increased. Open shop will result, if in addition to reducing wages, advantage is taken by employers to reopen old scores and start the trade union back to work. Discontented folks in such institutions as the department of labor and the United States Chamber of Commerce predict the failure on the part of union labor to force a closed shop on the country and the defeat of the manufacturers to bring about their kind of a closed shop.

Hoover Sure of Birth.

When the armistice is declared, both sides will be more reasonable but in the meantime the struggle is maintained to affect the changes of Herbert Hoover for the secretaryship of labor. The advantage that Mr. Hoover has is that Mr. Harding wants him either for secretary of labor or secretary of the interior. If he is subordinated for the one portfolio because of the open shop issue Mr. Hoover being a Californian and an engineer still remains eligible for the secretaryship of the interior, which usually goes to a westerner.

BLAINE DELIVERS FIRST MESSAGE

expressing protesting against "the extravagant proposals made by those who want to make this a militaristic nation."

Following up platform pledges advocating the initiative, referendum and recall and the placing of taxes on "those who can best bear the burden," the governor devoted a large part of his 7,000 word message to these subjects. He recommended the adoption of a constitutional amendment providing for the initiative and referendum on legislation and for the same method in amending the constitution. In principle, the governor said that it should not be available "until there has been an opportunity for the people to judge of the official acts of an elected officer, so that the vote when taken under the recall, will be on the merits of the incumbent's administration rather than to enable a defeated party to force a new election on the basis of rival candidates at a time when the incumbent had no opportunity to justify his election in the first instance." He also recommended that, when terms of office are short, the proposed law should guard against its use for the purpose "of harassing an official."

Income Tax Too Low.
In the section devoted to taxation, Gov. Blaine presented figures indicating that taxes on personal property produce about 35 times as much revenue, in normal years, as the income tax. The assessed value of tangible property, he said, is always increasing, and the tax rate assessed against it also increases, while the income tax rate is constant in excess of that sum, regardless of whether the income is that of an individual or a corporation. He recommended that no deduction from the income tax be allowed on capital stock, surplus or undivided profits. Such deductions, as allowed in the federal income tax law, have a tendency to cause capital accumulation and thus bring about discrimination between corporations and individuals, he said.

If likewise included dividends from all corporations, banks and other financial institutions, the income tax, regardless of whether the corporation has previously been assessed under the income tax law, would be regarded as a "perpetual memorial" to the deceased. The suggestion, he said, would in a few years put the educational institutions on a sound financial basis without any increase in taxes. "With the establishment of such a fund," the governor said, "those who are making final disposition of their property will feel at least that they may be regarded as a 'perpetual memorial' to the deceased. The suggestion, he said, would in a few years put the educational institutions on a sound financial basis without any increase in taxes."

Advancing Increased Inheritance Taxes. The governor proposed that all revenues from this source be added to the capital of the state university and other educational institutions, to be regarded as a "perpetual memorial" to the deceased. The suggestion, he said, would in a few years put the educational institutions on a sound financial basis without any increase in taxes. "With the establishment of such a fund," the governor said, "those who are making final disposition of their property will feel at least that they may be regarded as a 'perpetual memorial' to the deceased. The suggestion, he said, would in a few years put the educational institutions on a sound financial basis without any increase in taxes."

Secrecy Surrounding Income Tax Returns. The message says has resulted in protection of dishonest tax returns and encourages the tax evaders to make their returns. Gov. Blaine suggested the returns be opened to the inspection of state and local officials, interested citizens and to production in court.

Under the Head of Tax Exemptions. He included a reasonable amount of improvements, as a measure to encourage home-building, and remission of such part of the mill levy on personal property assessed for school, university and road funds, as may be met by the proposed increased income taxes.

Favors Disarmament.

Discussing his recommendation of disarmament memorial to congress, the governor said that Wisconsin's share of the national military and naval program will total $37,500,000 annually, a sum, he said, five times the cost of the new state capital, and sufficient to rebuild the entire state university seven times a year.

"The penal, reformatory, charitable and educational institutions are demanding more money," he said. "How much better it would be to use the money proposed for the national military and naval program in fighting disease, and in preventing poverty."

Would Memorialize Congress.

"Wisconsin ought to make her influence felt on opposition to this proposed war program at this time, and I, therefore, recommend that the only way by which that influence can be brought to the attention of congress is for you to memorialize congress in favor of the reduction of our armaments and to protest against the extravagant proposals made by those who want to make this a militaristic nation. The fundamental basis for world peace is immediate, progressive disarmament."

Would Separate Departments.

The present argument by which the division of market in a branch of the department of agriculture is unsatisfactory, the governor said, and the two should be separated. The marketing division, he said, should be a chief directly charged with the responsibility for its conduct. There is needless expense, he added, in the present duplication of effort by the division of market and the office of food commissioner, and he urged changes in existing laws to eliminate this duplication. He likewise urged extension of the power of the marketing division to prevent hoarding, trade agreements restricting distribution, as well as excessive and unreasonable profits on the necessities of life.

Opposes Voting by Proxy.

For the protection of co-operative associations he proposed prohibition of voting by proxy, declaring that small groups of men, holding the proxies of a widely scattered membership, had been able to manipulate the activities of many co-operative associations in a way that had sometimes led to bankruptcy. The state marketing division, he said, should have power to investigate the management and practices of the officers of such associations and audit their books. Exclusive contracts of sale between a marketing association and its members should be exempt from any legislation aimed at acts in restraint of trade, the governor added.

Speaks of Extending Credit.

Other sections of the message touched on extension of credit for the development of marketing and distribution of machinery; the basic eight hour day in industry; the compensation act; dependant's benefit medical aid; insurance; abolition of child labor; collective bargaining; elimination of grade crossings; unemployment; rehabilitation of industrial workers; railroad passenger fares; the corrupt practices act; education; state finances; and a short session for the legislature.

Owing to the illness of Mrs. L. P. Miller, the Gazette's Evansville correspondent, news should temporarily be telephoned to 228-M.

(By Gazette Correspondent.)

Evansville relatives and friends of who has signed up as a member of a concert company with the Continental Chautauque company of Louisville, Ky., made her first appearance on the chautauque platform in a town in southern Indiana last night. The concert company of which she is a member consists of a reader and pianist, a violinist, a tenor soloist, and Miss Johnson as soprano soloist.

Miss Pauline Garry went to Madison Tuesday evening to hear Benno Moisewitsch, a Russian pianist, who gave a concert in the university gymnasium.

Miss Jessie McMurray returned Tuesday evening from a visit with friends in Madison and Oregon.

At a joint mid-week meeting of the Baptist and Methodist churches last night, it was decided to hold a series of revival meetings. George Taylor, evangelist, and Mr. Roth, singer, who are now holding meetings in Baraboo, are to be called to take charge of these meetings. They will begin about February first, but it is not yet decided which church they will be held in.

Out of town friends who were here to attend the funeral of the late Edward Reese were: Charles Atkinson and Mrs. Albert Eroughton, Broad-in Wisconsin, the governor said, and judging from the past, he predicted that this situation will continue through the coming summer unless steps are taken to relieve it. With $28,000,000 available for state road construction, he recommended that the industrial commission, through the state's free employment office, endeavor to absorb a large part of the idle men in road construction. Preference should be given, he said, to men with no farming experience or who cannot be placed on farms.

Protests Federal Usurpation.

Charging the federal government is taking over the powers of the states, partly through "a species of bribery," the governor issued a warning against this "dangerous tendency."

"The species of bribery to which I refer," he said, "comes of legislation by the federal government in making an appropriation for some purpose under conditions that the state must meet the appropriation with a like amount. Sometimes the objects to be accomplished are in the interests of humanity and for the better security of the nation while in other cases the object sought to be accomplished is to coerce the less progressive states into adopting certain legislation. Some of the purposes are, no doubt, desirable, but to my mind, in many cases the state might better afford to embark upon the same undertaking independently, and by foregoing the appropriation made by the federal government, actually carry out the same project more economically. I therefore recommend to you that you closely scrutinize every project that is presented under the pretense that the state will receive the bounties of the federal government."

Business Girls Organize.—That the business girls club is a success is shown by the fact that nearly 200 women from all the industries of the city gathered at the Methodist church Wednesday evening to organize for future meetings. Simple in form, with no dues, no bylaws, and no set machinery, the club has seemed to fill a social need for the employed girls of the city. With the slogan "The Most Fun for the Money" the young women are planning many happy gatherings for the future. It was voted last evening to continue the committee which has arranged previous affairs, making it an executive board. GETTING DOWN TO PRICE BOTTOM.

Things are getting to the bottom of the price scale. Never have there been so low costs to the buyer in scores and scores of articles for three years as now. Every line of news from the east shows that the trend of prices for wholesale buying is upward. Therefore it behooves the buyer to get busy. Every dollar put into circulation now helps all along the line. It puts more men to work, sells more farm products for the employed man's table, and makes business. When thousands are out of work the thousands only buy what is actually necessary. There is stagnation in all lines. Stimulate the disposal of products and you stimulate selling as well as buying. Buy and you stimulate manufacture; get manufacture going and you have labor employed; get labor employed and you have a market for products. It's the greatest circle in the world, and if we weaken one link or drop our hands, we get depression. Buy now with low prices and get the money of the nation in motion in harmony with the wheels of industry.

GOVERNOR BLAINE'S MESSAGE.

Governor Blaine's message is a most agreeable disappointment. He has been mild in demands and except for the emphasis on the initiative, referendum and recall, has few evidences in the document presented to the legislature, of the forces with which he trained prior to the nomination. We will all agree with him on the demand for economy. The demands made by the state institutions, reaching $71,000,000 are greater than the total income of the state. This is the problem of the legislature—how to make income and outgo meet on a balance sheet. We are taxed enough. Every expensive commission—all those altruistic things that cost money and whose benefits are questionable should be wiped out. We have too many commissions. Mr. Blaine has not gone far enough into these specific needs. He has talked of getting more taxes from the rich, and that is all very well. But what we want is less taxes from all and a government that will be less expensive generally.

The people will agree with the governor heartily in his recommendation that labor should be put to work on the roads. That is in keeping with what the Gazette has been advocating all along—keeping labor employed. Public works are the greatest panic preventive. We need more and better highways and need them quickly.

The governor is inclined to forget the political campaign in which he was elected. His spoken word and his pledge to keep the factional political phases out of the administration of his office is given. No one will take issue with him on that ground, except possibly the same element that demands to rule or ruin in the state, with a one-man power. Solidly back of him the governor will find every patriotic citizen of the state who wishes to see Wisconsin foremost of the forty-eight in a legislative and executive program that will mean economy, the distribution of the tax burdens equitably and the stimulation of industry and employment.

GET BUSY! BUILD NOW!

The slogan of the Master Builders is a good one for the whole nation. "Build now!" Labor is plentiful, materials are priced within reach and there is a demand the world over for homes. There are empty houses in Janesville and in every other city, but in almost every case where a house fails of renting the reason is plain: it is not possessed of modern conveniences. The renter demands a bath room, an inside toilet, electric light wiring and gas connections. He wants to be on a street with a sewer and he wants a house that does not sag at the ridge pole or has a shaky front porch. He has been trained to live better and the miners' shack and the cabin that used to be found at mine or mill, no longer invites him. The workman has pride and wants his children to have comfortable environment. The time has passed when any old rookery could be passed off on him except in the case of dire necessity. In an article in the Dry Goods Economist analyzing the downward trend of prices and showing that the bottom for most everything had been reached, the statement is made that rents alone are the greatest factor in the high cost of living now. This is due to the shortage of houses. The man with a family must have a home whether he is employed or not. Therefore it is a good time to build new houses and to put modern conveniences into the old shells if they are to bring an income.

"Build Now," can be changed also into "Re-build Now."

NOT ORGANIZED FOR ANY ONE MAN BUT FOR THE PEOPLE.

One of the La Follette newspapers bewails the fact that the "Progressives" failed to defeat Riley Young for the speakership and to organize the assembly. "Somehow the loss to the state by this failure does not appear so great to the average citizen. If the word "progressive" means anything it means that the assembly and the senate have progressive leadership in Speaker Young and President Burke of the senate. Both are men of progress. True, they are not hitched to any man nor are they to be guided by the political necessities of the senior senator from the state. They do, however, guarantee to the business of law-making a steady hand and a check on the sort of thing that the experimenter in

What Alaska Offers

By FREDERICK J. OASIN.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.—General farming in Alaska has been proven possible, and about a hundred thousand square miles of rich agricultural and grazing land are there to be had for the taking by settlers who are willing to brave a somewhat difficult climate.

One of the scientists connected with the Government agricultural experiment stations in Alaska here on a few days, and that is the word he brings. If you are looking for a chance to get a farm of your own without any considerable capital, Alaska offers you that chance.

Nearly everybody nowadays knows that Alaska is not a snow-covered, ice-bound waste all the year round. Not so many realize the wonderful possibilities of this far northern territory in its summer season. This Government scientist brings word that Alaska could be practically self-supporting so far as ordinary farm products go. Right now, the majority of the standard fruits, vegetables and grains are grown here. He says that what Alaska needs is more settlers with the spirit of pluck and a willingness to work to develop its farm lands.

Here, he says, is a country with 50,000 inhabitants spread over nearly 600,000 square miles. This population would be lost in a corner of New York City. It is about the number of people that live in Atlantic City, Omaha, Kansas, or Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. Scattered over this country are about 300 homesteads, working tracts of 160 or 320 acres, and there remain 100,000 square miles of land—the size of an average state—which could be used for practical farming, about half for farm land, and the other half for grazing.

The land, then, is there. And the Government is maintaining five agricultural experiment stations in Alaska, where all sorts of experiments are conducted to help farmers. Farming in this latitude presents different difficulties from farming in the states. Potatoes can be raised in Alaska, and cauliflower, beans, strawberries, lettuce, and many other familiar foods. But you cannot take any kind of strawberry plant, for instance, and expect to get firm sweet berries.

The strawberry illustrates very well what it means to adapt a product of a temperate climate to conditions in the far north. The experiment station at Sitka has made 12,000 tests with strawberries in order to find varieties really suited to Alaska. To make the experiments the two wild strawberries native to Alaska were crossed with different hardy varieties of the cultivated strawberry. Ninety-four of the plants proved too frail for the climate, or produced soft or insipid fruit. These were discarded at once. Of the other ten left but three or four in every hundred were also discarded as not altogether satisfactory, leaving the best product so far as color, flavor and size of the berries was concerned. This is a good example of how the agricultural problems are worked out for arctic and near-arctic regions.

Long and extensive experiments have been conducted to find grain suitable for hardy and swift in growing, and to plant, and harvest to be crowded into the brief Alaskan summer. It seems to be impossible to make grain more hardy by a process of selection. That is, when the Government agents took a few seeds from the best grain one year and planted them the next, and again took the best of the harvest and planted that, and so on for several years, there was no improvement in the strain, as there would be in some vegetables.

The way to produce grain hardy enough for the climate is to cross the various strong varieties and try them out. As a result of experiment along this line, spring wheat that runs 22 bushels to the acre, rye taller than a man, and a number of successful varieties of barley and oats have been produced in Alaska.

Alaska could be absolutely independent so far as breadstuffs are concerned, and the Government agent says so. And Alaska is slowly gaining this independence. A flour mill—the first in Alaska—has been established in Fairbanks, so that it is no longer necessary to get flour from Seattle and to pay heavy freight on it.

As for independence along other lines of foodstuffs, Alaska may attain that also to a reasonable degree. Practically every standard vegetable can be grown in the best farming localities of the country. The majority of the fruits have been successfully produced. Strong broods of cattle and sheep are being developed at the experiment stations. At recent banquet in Fairbanks, the conquest of the soil by Alaska was shown by having the entire menu of home-grown products.

These are the true signs of progress. The difficulties of life in the far north are mainly the climate, and then lack of transportation and hired labor. Transportation prospects are improving now that the railroad from Seward to Fairbanks is well under way, with a chance of being completed next year. Farm help is still scarce because a large proportion of the 10,000 men who left Alaska for war service have not returned. Climate remains the big problem to be met in life in this part of the world. What the homesteader can raise in his garden, now he can market surplus products, whether he lives in comfort or misery depends on his understanding of the climate and how to adapt himself to it. Temperature and humidity are so widely varied in this territory that it is difficult to describe the Alaskan weather conditions as a whole. At Sitka the thermometer rarely goes to zero, and the winters are not much colder than those of Washington, D. C. At Fairbanks on the other hand, 60 degrees below zero is not unknown. This is the sort of weather which typifies Alaska to most people, and it is the fear of encountering months of unbroken cold that makes many an otherwise adventurous spirit cling to the comparative warmth of a semi-heated flat in what is supposed to be a temperate zone.

Alaskan winters are in general snowy and cold. In the summer, for about three months, the country warms up considerably, and in some places the sun gets so hot that the men knock off from work in the hottest part of the day. This is the season when the land owner has to hustle to raise and harvest his crops. He has only from May to possibly the first of September, three and a half months at most, when weather conditions are favorable to farming, and while this is about the length of the farming season in North Dakota and Montana, it seems short in comparison with the six or eight month season in a large part of our country.

In spite of farming limitations, Alaskan soil is yielding a living, and Alaska is a new country. Its cities have their stores, banks, and theaters, but beyond their limits are endless stretches of open land waiting for the settler with the pioneer spirit.

As the agricultural agent bowed us out of the door, he had this to say: "If we could only get the young women to come out there, the men would come easily enough."

Evidently he feels like the type of woman who was willing to sail for America on the Mayflower, or so we were in '49, is dying out of our race. It may be partly that. It may also be that the type of man who could inspire a woman to follow him to a pioneer life is vanishing.

State socialism is constantly attempting to put upon the people. The legislature seems to be organized for the people and not for any one man—which is a good and acceptable sign in this state.

The Hon. Tim Burke, who has been in the state senate ever since they stopped running logs down the Peshigo river, and Green Bay was a fishing station, has been selected as president of that honorable body and will, we assume, carry the honors with both dignity and dispatch.

Failure of the manufacturers of snow shovels may be looked for. A movement should be started to hand-paint these utensils and stand them in the corner as curios.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

WHEN YOU GIVE YOUR GIRL AWAY.
Last night we had it all rehearsed, an I could joke about it then, and now the minister is here, and all the women folks are an' men.
Are waitin' in the parlor there, an' pretty soon they'll come, I know, an' time for all of us go.
I wish I didn't feel like this—I wouldn't spoil her wedding day.
I never thought 'twould be so hard to give my little girl away.

Since mother tied my tie an' said that I looked fine, I've been in here.
Just thinkin' of her, 'bout all her life from year to year.
It doesn't seem so long ago since she was just the little girl.
I used to go an' kiss each night when she was sleepin' in a cot.
An' now I can't sleep an' tonight I've got a bitter pill to play—
It isn't any smilin' task to give your little girl away.

The boy's all right, I must confess, an' when he first came in to me.
An' asked if he could marry her, I was as proud as man can be.
But here's the wedding hour at hand, an' now they want me in the line—
I hope nobody notices those red streaks round these eyes o' mine—
All ready, Mother? Let's go down. What's that? I'm quiverin' you say?
Well, I confess I turn down deep to have to give my girl away.

MR. WOOD HAS A FAT CHANCE.

Alonso Wood, a farmer near Savannah, N. Y., lost his gold watch valued at $100, while packing apples a few days ago. Search was made and many of the barrels not yet shipped were dumped, but to no purpose. Mr. Wood's monogram is engraved on the watch, which is believed to have been in a shipment to New York city. If anybody gets hold of it, let it be sent as a prize package or covered by the first post, Mr. Wood explains.

Who's Who Today

CAPT. ROBERT BARTLETT.

Another effort will be made to fly to the north pole. Captain Robert A. Bartlett of the United States navy will try to do it in one of the most powerful military airplanes, capable of a sustained flight at the rate of from 100 to 125 miles an hour. By this means the captain declares that from the most northern point of a sustained flight he can get to the pole and back inside of twenty-four hours.

Captain Bartlett accompanied Rear Admiral Peary on his expedition to the pole. Bartlett is a Newfoundland, forty-five years of age. He was born at Briggs, Newfoundland. He has been an explorer for twenty-two years ago, wintering with Peary in the Kana Basin in 1907.

He commanded the Resolute in its famous trip of 1906, reaching the eighty-eighth parallel. He left with the Canadian government Arctic expedition in 1913-14; his vessel was crushed by the ice, and Bartlett, with seventeen others, reached Wrangel Island.

He left Wrangel Island, and with one Eskimo crossed to Siberia on the ice and returned with a rescue party.

He is one of the best known Arctic explorers in the world.

Ventures in Common Sense

By ED. HOWE, of Atchison.

The popular notion is that it is all right to rob the fools. But it will finally become necessary to rob them less, and teach them more.

When I think of the wonderful things that are undoubtedly true, and of the little things yet to be discovered, I not only blush because I don't know, but marvel because so many people manufacture wonderful experiences. Instead of studying the wonders that are undisputed, if we love the wonderful and mysterious, let us study the wonders that are undisputed. One of the world's great books was written about a country community; about the natural wonders surrounding a village. Within five miles of where you live, there are enough strange things to keep you wondering all your life. Probably in your doorway may be found enough to employ the intellect of a strong man; one of the great discoveries in science was made by a man in cultivating the ordinary garden pea.

A fool will not only pay for a cure that does him no good, but he will write a testimonial that he was cured.

LOOKING BACKWARD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Jan. 13, 1881.—The Bowler City Rifles will tomorrow dedicate their new armory, which is in the Bennett block. Mon. Pliny Norcross will give the dedicatory address. Miss Minnie Eldredge will give readings. The Bowler City band will play, and the Bowler City club will sing, after which dancing will be enjoyed.

THIRTY-ONE YEARS AGO

Jan. 13, 1890.—There was a light fall of snow around the city last night and it was about an inch deep this morning. The snow was blown on the ground for some time previous to last night. The drug stores are now doing a big business in quinine, due to the prevalence of la grippe. There are many cases in the city and all through the country.

TEN YEARS AGO

Jan. 13, 1911.—A deputy from Madison is still in this city looking over the remains of the Fisher (house) which was burned several years ago, destroying thousands of dollars worth of tobacco. The state fire marshal was here yesterday and does not think that the origin of the fire was due to an accident.

IS CALOMEL STILL EXTANT?

I asserted the other day that calomel produces no effect on the liver that may not be obtained from other safer physics.

Do you care just people. Most doctors are, at any rate. Some are not so just. I have prescribed and administered my share of calomel in my time. I used to accept what the medical fathers passed on down, and without even thinking of questioning their traditions. I used to dole out some calomel to almost every patient I attended; you know, a wee bit of it, say twenty doses every hour or half hour for a day—something to keep the mother or nurse out of mischief while I was waiting to see what ailed the patient. Not only that, I regarded the calomel as the best of all the little would sort of cheer up all the organs and put them in a proper receptive mood for any further abuse.

Then I had my first child. I bore my share. Troubles, I mean. That child was always the center of my life. I was something, and I was scared into a lot of study I had never intended to bother about. Somehow, when it came to administering the medicine to O.G.R. baby, I wanted to know why. There was no call, as they say in N. Carolina, no call at all to keep mother and nurse out of mischief at our house. So I thought over this calomel question, and O.G.R. baby received no calomel. And yet, do you know, the little bambino she never came down with whatever it was, after all. That is, she never had anything very serious.

Then I had my second baby. Of course her mother was hugging round sympathizing with me and all that. But I was my own man, and I was the second. She seemed to know the instant I got out my calomel tablets, and no matter what I did nor how I disguised it, she just insisted on going along so victoriously without any.

Well, it is a long, sad story. We need some more laws to unburden us—we fathers. Ours is a downright devilish sex. We need a sort of viciously tickle sleep.

Calomel, I discovered in my investigations and researches, is now practically passed with thinking, well educated physicians—and I returned to the use of calomel as a physic, calomel was employed chiefly, if not entirely, by the back numbers of the profession, so far as it was professed.

Q. Can the scent gland be removed from skunks? M. C.

A. This operation can be performed with little danger when the skunk is four or five months old. It is not necessary to remove the scent sacs from skunks that are being raised for the fur market. If they are kept as rat and mouse destroyers it is advisable. Skunks are dangerous to cats as mousers if these glands are removed.

Q. Can a man destroy or disfigure his own money? W. H. W.

A. The Treasury Department says that a person may do anything he likes to his own money, but after it has been punctured or defaced in any way it cannot be placed in circulation again. That is, the hole cannot be filled in and the coin again used as lawful money.

Q. Who were the Bashk Hazouks? D. S. S.

A. The Bashk Hazouks are Turkish irregular troops, natives of the pastures of Asia Minor and possessing the worst reputation of any class of fighting men in the world. They are wild and turbulent and ready to plunder and kill at any time.

Q. What is the longest river in the world, and what is the widest? M. R. D.

A. The longest river in the world is the Mississippi-Missouri, 4,194 miles. The widest river is probably the Amazon, its width being 600 miles at its main mouth.

Q. What is the derivation of the name "Hottel Row" in Hyde Park, London? A. W.

A. The name "Hottel Row" is supposed to be derived from "Route de Roi" or "King's Drive." The king is the only person who may drive down it.

Q. Who said "the good and let who will be clever"? S. S. J.

A. The quotation is from a poem "A Farewell" by Charles Kingsley. The verse from which the words are taken being:

Q. What is Brazilian grass? E. W. A.

A. This is a name incorrectly applied to a substance used in the manufacture of cheap kind of hats known as "Brazilian grass hats," and also as clip hats. It consists of strips of leaves of a palm, which are imported to Great Britain, and are used for this manufacture, chiefly from Cuba.

WHITE - FRIEDMAN IN GRUDGE FIGHT

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Boxing contests, as a rule, usually are advertised as "grudge" affairs, but for no other reason than publicity.

But there will be a genuine grudge fight staged in Kenosha, Wis., when Charlie White and Sailor Friedman, rival Chicago lightweight fighters, meet in a ten round contest Jan. 14. They have been bitter enemies for years. Friedman has sought a match with White for two years, only to be turned down a dozen times. White has declared he would never give Friedman an opportunity to make a dollar in the ring with him.

Nothing for Friedman. A Kenosha promoter induced White to box by promising him a guarantee of $3,000. Friedman will not receive a cent unless the gate receipts exceed $5,000. Then he will share in a small percentage. Because of the interest in the match among their Chicago admirers, the "house" was virtually sold out a day after the match was made. White and Friedman both are of Jewish parentage and have a large Chicago following. Special trains will carry their admirers to the battle ground.

White insisted on the weight, knowing 135 pounds at 3 o'clock, knowing that Friedman will have difficulty in making that figure.

White and Friedman have cordially hated each other from the time they engaged in a training bout in a Chicago gymnasium. Friedman wanted to fight with all the desperation of a champion. Since then White never asked his rival to put the gloves on with him, and they have managed to avoid each other in the gymnasium and elsewhere.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 12.—Secretary Walter Truby of the state boxing commission received a letter from Jew Willard, ex-heavyweight champion from Lawrence, Kans., asking him if there was a suitable place in New Jersey for training quarters, and in report of plans for living quarters. Willard, who is to fight Jack Dempsey in New York March 17, said he wanted to come east soon. Truby replied, suggesting Long Branch, Trenton, Red Bank, or Atlantic City.

TERRIBLE TESSIE

By Hal Probasco

Here and There, but Mostly Here

By FRANK SINCLAIR, Sporting Editor.

Ever stop to consider that an athlete can become so good doing the exceptional that the fans fail to give him credit for doing the ordinary?

It's sure enough true. The next time you have a chance to make any steady observations of a group of athletes, see if it isn't so. It seems that human nature is so constituted that when a man repeats doing the extraordinary they soon take his feats as nothing unusual.

Take Schwid's Case.

It was illustrated in large measure here last summer by a number of the Samson baseball club. We have in mind Art Schwid, the snappy local shortstop.

Everybody recognized in Art perhaps the fastest infielder in semi-pro ball in the middle west. But they sometimes complained that he failed to stop some hits. While he may have been guilty of that, the crowd seldom remembered that Schwid was a ranging infielder and covered much more territory—from second base to second and toward the pitcher's box—than the usual shortstop. With a speedy ability to rush up on the pill, pick it up and snap it to first, they soon came to expect him to do it every time without a mistake.

Needs Much Nerve.

It requires nerve and lots of it for a fellow to combine red-bloodedness with head work and to after every ball that comes his way hot off the bat with pounds of steam behind it. Schwid had all of that and the man who knew it above all others was Manager Zerring.

Schwid has what is called in the sporting world an "edge." He has lots of it. As the ball gets near the plate, he has an uncanny judgment of just about where that ball is going if the batter connects. This is an asset that is particularly valuable in an infielder because it is harder for him to obtain it than it is for an outfielder who has a greater range of vision and a little more time. It is

Oakley, center for the brown and blue, showed the same form as in the recent games with Janesville and Milton independent teams. Milton's 28 points being due to his stellar shooting. Capt. Lanphere and Kakuske each played a good all-around game and were the applause of the crowd by constantly breaking up the opposing team's plays. Thomas starred for Carroll, with six field goals to his credit.

HIGH SCHOOL TO TACKLE MADISON TEAM TOMORROW

Following a practice game of both the first and second teams Wednesday afternoon with a group from the Y. M. C. A., Janesville High is about ready to tackle Madison University high here Friday night. The game will give a good idea of what to expect when Beloit and Janesville meet in the near future. Beloit having defeated Wisconsin high 16 to 13 last week. The Madison boys have held overs from last year. The team is fast on long short shots and requires plenty of close guarding.

Ten players will be in uniform for Janesville, making up two teams. The quality of both the first and second is about equal, giving a good bunch of second line men. Those who will take the floor are Art Yardley, Lawrence, Ed McDermott, forwards; Smith and Crowley, centers; and Lane, Newman, Kelly and Seaman, guards.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Below Cost

We want to state again with greater emphasis that Ford cars are already being sold at a figure actually below cost and for an indefinite period another reduction or change in design is entirely out of the question and not at all contemplated.

The necessary curtailment in production of cars at this time will undoubtedly mean a shortage this spring, so that many desiring Ford cars will be obliged to wait, perhaps, until midsummer for delivery. Better buy now when delivery can be made.

Spring is less than sixty days away, and orders will be coming in so fast a little later on that a great many will be disappointed
